HORRORS! NOTED GUNMAN MAY BE SECRETED HERE

Local Detachment Of Troopers Asked To Be On Lookout For "Dutch" Anderson.

George "Dutch" Anderson, notorious bandit, "pal" of Gerald Chapman, now under sentence of death for the slaying of a Hartford, Connecticut, policeman, may be in the vicinity of Gettysburg, if information received by the state police is correct.

The local sub-station of state police received word this morning that Anderson is expected to be in this vicinity somewhere and local troopers are urged to be on the lookout for him.

Some time ago, Anderson is suspected of having slain a man and his wife, who are said to have given information to Muncie, Indiana, police officers, which led to the arrest of Chapman and his ultimate conviction in Connecticut. Police authorities declare that the slaying of the Muncie, Indiana, couple, alleged to have been executed by Anderson and his pals, was done in a spirit of revenge for "squealing" on Chapman.

Anderson is wanted for his escape from the United States penitentiary, Atlanta, Georgia, and for murder in Delaware county, Indiana. A reward of $1500 has been offered for his apprehension.

The bulletin received by local state police regarding information relative to Anderson says in part:

"This man is well educated, speaks several languages, can enter society, is fond of music, good literature and good living, often frequenting good hotels and high class furnished apartments. Lately, however, he has been dressing roughly and living in small towns and rural districts, and at times at lake resorts where, with pals, he rents a furnished cottage. He speaks with Swedish accent. He is a murderer, safe-blower, all around bandit, pickpocket, forger, bank-burglar and general thief."

The bulletin relates further information concluding with the warning that "extreme caution should be exercised as this man is a killer and will likely resist arrest."

Jail Breaker Sought

E. G. Humbert, alias George Humbert, alias E. G. Hubert, alias George Hubert, Italian, American born, 28 years of age, is being sought also by state police here. He escaped from the Snyder county jail at Middleburg, Pa., in September, while awaiting trial on charges of burglary and larceny. He is also wanted in Somerset and Fayette counties, this state, on charges of burglary. A reward of $150 is offered for information leading to his arrest.

The American Railway Express Company notifies the local sub-station of state police that they will pay $1000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the hold-up and murder of Lester C. Kiser, night depot agent at the office of the company in Bradford, this state, last month.

NEW TROOPER STATIONED HERE

Private James F. Mitchell of the state police, formerly stationed at the Chambersburg post, arrived in Gettysburg Thursday, having been transferred here following service in the Chambersburg district.

Private C. W. Freudenberger was transferred to the Chambersburg station after serving several months here. Corporal Kasparvich and Trooper Russel W. Freutchey are the other two troopers at the Getysburg station.

Mount Joy Township Meteorite Proudly Displayed in Museum in Vienna, Traveller Learns

Odd Stone Substance Discovered On Farm Of Jacob Snyder, One Mile North Of Two Taverns, In 1887 Is Object Of Interest In One Of Most Famous Old World Capitals.

In the Museum of Natural History in Vienna, Austria, are two exhibits of particular interest to Adams county people, according to the Rev. Dr. Earl S. Rudisill, pastor of Grace Lutheran church, West Philadelphia, and son of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Rudisill, of Two Taverns, who recently returned from Europe and saw the exhibits in the Vienna museum in August.

They are cross sections of a meteorite found in Adams county. Knowing that the meteorite or a portion of it was located somewhere in Vienna, Doctor Rudisill first tried to find it in the geological museum, but found there only a model. He was directed to the Museum of Natural History, meteorite division. There he was shown to the proper section by Dr. Carl Hlawatsch, of the museum staff.

The one cross-section is much larger than the other, he reports. Both are thickly flecked with different colors and shades. Each has several cracks running through it. They are also marred from some discoloration due to low temperature and dampness during the war period when coal was not obtainable and the museum was without heat. During that period many specimens in different parts of the museum were lost for the same reason. They are now being duplicated as fast as possible.

The label on the larger cross-section reads thus (in German): "31. Meteoric iron, Mount Joy, Adams county, Pennsylvania, United States. Found 1887. Weight, 141 kilograms." The smaller one is thus inscribed: "30. Meteoric iron, Mount Joy, Adams county, Pennsylvania, United States. Found 1887. Weight, 28 kilograms."

Doctor Hlawatsch declared that this is the most interesting meteorite he has seen, since it contains so many different elements.

Found In 1887

The meteorite was found in the autumn of 1887 by Jacob Snyder on his farm one mile north of Two Taverns, while planting fruit trees. He had dug a hole and found in the bottom a stubborn hard stone. Some assistance was necessary to remove it. It was first identified as a meteorite by D. C. Rudisill, who was at that time teaching at Pleasant Grove school, between Two Taverns and Littlestown. The fact that it contained nickel in combination with iron was the basis of identification. The chemical analysis was made at the Gettysburg College laboratories. This meteorite is said to be the largest ever found east of the Mississippi.

The discovery of this mass of meteoric iron attracted considerable attention at the time. Several souvenirs were made from it by J. J. Epley, of Two Taverns, and several pieces from the mass are still in the hands of Mr. Rudisill. The find was sold by Mr. Snyder, with the reservation of a good sized piece. Later that piece was also let go. And now a portion of the Mount Joy township discovery is an object of interest in one of the most famous old world capitals.

This County School Ma'rm, at Flapper Age, Walks 10 Miles to and From Work Every Day

Miss Clara Benchoff, 18 Years Old, Helps With Chores Around House And Then Trips Gayly Five Miles To Take Up Her Duties As Teacher Of Pine Grove School.

That all modern girls are not of the flapper type is proved in the case of Miss Clara Benchoff, eighteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Benchoff, residing near Swartz's schoolhouse, on the former George Eckert farm, Conewago township, Adams county.

The young miss, who is tall and of the athletic type, is teaching her first term at Pine Grove schoolhouse, Union township, located about five miles from her parents' home, and she thinks nothing of walking the ten miles to and from the school. But Clara is just an "old-fashioned girl."

We wonder what some of the Gettysburg frauleins of her age would say if they had to be up, help to do the household tasks and be ready for the long tramp to work before 6 o'clock? Glara's grandmother told a reporter that the young schoolteacher never complains about her lengthy trip mornings and evenings but takes it all as part of the day's routine.

When the weather is very disagreeable and her father is unable to work in the field, he may hook a horse into the buggy and take his daughter to school, but she does not count on this assistance. Clara was graduated from the Hanover High School with last year's class. She walked to school the distance of two miles during her four years in high school, and helped on the farm each evening, besides. Her father was sick in bed all last fall and winter, and Clara helped to haul in 1,600 bushels of corn after she came home from school.

She took a course at the Millersville State Normal School this summer to prepare her for eaching. She has some 20 pupils now but will have many more when the fall tasks on the farms are ended and the older pupils start in their studies.

DR. WENTZ LOOKS INTO FUTURE IN SERMON TO SYNOD

Predicts Living Conditions Completely Revolutionized With Sessions by Radio.

"There will be a substitute for sleep; man's time will be doubled and perhaps trebled; foods will cost a very small fraction of what they now cost; and light will cost less than one-fiftieth of what it now costs," declared Dr. A. R. Wentz, professor of church history in the Gettysburg Seminary, addressing the closing session of the West Pennsylvania Synod in Chambersburg Thursday evening.

"It does make a tremendous difference whether you think the world is getting better or worse. What you think about it will of course not change the trend of matters, but it will very vitally influence your own attitude towards men and things, particularly the things of the future," continued the speaker.

Reviewing The Past

"We have been reviewing these days the main events and achievements of the hundred years past in the life of the West Pennsylvania Synod. It is a glorious record of magnificent progress for the Kingdom of our Lord. And I congratulate you laymen on belonging to a synod of such size and vigor, of such uniform loyalty to God and the church, of such fidelity to the faith and such aggressiveness in Christian works, a synod that has produced so many noble servants of God both in the pulpit and in the pew. In the name of the officers of the Maryland Synod, your nearest of kin (in location, in age, in size, and in temper), I bring most hearty congratulations.

JOE HARRIS, HERO OF SERIES, HERE

Slugging Out-fielder of Washington Baseball Team, Guest at Local Hotel With His Wife.

Joe Harris, right-fielder of the Washington Senators' baseball team, visted in Gettysburg today with Mrs. Harris and her mother, Mrs. W. L. Hepner. The Harrises are enroute to Franklin, Pennsylvania, where Mr. Harris will remain for several weeks.

The slugging Senator fielder plans to hunt in the forests about his hometown during the next month, after which he plans to leave for the south where he will continue his favorite winter sport—hunting.

Commenting on the seventh and deciding game of the world series which was lost by the Senators after a bitter struggle, Mr. Harris said:

"Had the day been any where near baseball weather, I feel sure that we would have stopped the Pirates. It was impossible, after the sixth inning, to see the ball leave the bat, from the outfield. We outfielders were forced to watch the infielders. If they turned in one direction, so did the outfielders; if they turned the other way, so did we. The fly ball that went over Goose Goslin's head was lost until it whizzed five feet above the 'Goose'. He failed to see the ball at all. We lost and we have no alibi to offer."

When told that "Bucky" Harris stopped in Gettysburg yesterday, Joe Harris said: "That couldn't be as Bucky went to Washington with us aboard a train and left shortly after a meeting held in the clubhouse for Laurel, Maryland."

William Zinkand reported yesterday that the Senator manager stopped at his place of business yesterday morning and was presented with a bouquet of flowers by Mrs. Zinkand.

From Mr. Harris' expression this morning, it appeared that some tourists had played a practical joke on the Lincoln Highway merchant of "50-50" fame.

Oldest and Youngest Hunters in State Are In Adams County

Simon S. Smith, Cashtown, Gets License At 84 Years, While Donald Swisher, 14 Years Old, Gettysburg, R. D. 2, Officially Given Permission To Shoulder Gun In Search Of Game; Licenses In Demand.

Adams county boasts of the oldest and the youngest hunter in the state, and perhaps in the country.

Late Friday afternoon, Simon S. Smith, 84 years of age, Cashtown, took out a license to hunt game during the hunting season this fall. This morning Donald Swisher, 14, Gettysburg Route 2, was given a license to hunt, when his father consented to the issuance of the license.

In Smith and Swisher, Adams county officials believe that they have the youngest and the oldest hunters. Mr. Smith has been securing licenses to hunt for a number of years and is considered by local sportsmen to be one of the best shots in the county.

Young Swisher took out his first license this morning. It was necessary to receive the consent of his father before County Treasurer Troxell could issue the tag.

Woman Teacher To Hunt

Miss Reida Longnecker, a student at Gettysburg College, and who resides in Gettysburg, also received a license to hunt game in the county this fall. Miss Longnecker is the sixth county woman to receive a tag. Mrs. James Oyler, Gettysburg, was the first woman to receive a tag.

A total of 1323 licenses to hunt has been issued thus far by County Treasurer Troxell, with every indication pointing to the total exceeding 1400 before the day is over.

Last year, 4306 countians received licenses with 31 non-residents. It is believed that this number will be exceeded before November 1 arrives.

Two non-resident tags have been issued thus far this year.

W. M. EMPLOYES MAKE OVERTURE TO END STRIKE

Engineers And Firemen Look For Word To Return At Old Wage Scale.

Overtures to end the strike as suddenly as it began emanated late yesterday from the Baltimore headquarters of union engineers, firemen and hostlers who left their jobs on the Western Maryland Railway at 6 a. m. Thursday.

Between 400 and 500 men are on strike pending settlement of a dispute between them and the railroad over wages and working rules.

Answering an order of the United States Railroad Labor Board to appear before that body Monday for a hearing, and to return to the "status quo" pending the outcome of the hearing, international brotherhood chiefs in Cleveland wired the board they had instructed their representatives to take up with the management the question of suspending the strike, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Chicago.

Expects To Send Answer

Maxwell C. Byers, president of the railroad, said he received a communication yesterday from Fred Barr and W. A. Paddock, representatives of the brotherhoods, who have been handling

ROAD DETOUR IS REMOVED

Harrisburg Link Practically Finished; Small Detour Over Barlow's Knoll; All Macadam.

Motorists of Gettysburg and the countless hundreds who continue to pour into the city to visit the battlefield, and thence want to proceed into Harrisburg, will not have to make a one and three-tenths mile detour over a rough, clay, narrow road. The detour has been removed, following the completion of the laying of concrete on the connecting link with the Harrisburg road.

The detour removed, motorists are sent out Carlisle street to the first avenue intersection on the battlefield. At the intersection they turn right, and proceed over Barlow's Knoll onto the Harrisburg road. The last several hundred feet of roadway will be completed in a short time, according to the contractor, removing the last small detour. The present stretch over Barlow's Knoll is a macadam road to the highway where the motorist will strike concrete.

The Harrisburg road when completed will present a concrete road to within a few miles of Harrisburg.

Ceded Back To State

Some time ago the federal government ceded back to the state some fourteen odd miles of connecting links on the battlefield—small sections of road connecting the paved streets of town with the highways. Because of the inadequate appropriation from Congress for upkeep and repairs to the battlefield, local authorities were unable to keep the connecting links in a good state of repair and motorists complained of the bad sections leading into town.

The state accepted the roads and started immediately to put them in fit condition to travel. The Harrisburg link was ordered concreted. The Biglerville section was ordered macadamed. Workmen will soon have this road completed.

Other links will be finished from time to time, according to highway officials.

Many Local People Go To Pittsburgh

One of the largest delegations of football fans to follow the Orange and Blue to foreign fields accompanied the college squad to Pittsburgh, for the Gettysburg-Pittsburgh battle this afternoon. Perhaps the largest caravan comprised students at the local institution of learning. Some left as early as Thursday, others on Friday and still others were seen leaving the town early this morning.

J. Price Oyler, J. E. Oyler, Ralph Oyler and C. Richard Wolff comprised one automobile party to the Smoky City. P. W. Stallsmith left on Thursday, stopping enroute in Johnstown to transact business before proceeding on to Pittsburgh.

Conservative estimates place the number of Gettysburg fans in the Pitt stadium this afternoon at several hundred. Some of the students "bummed" their way by seeking "lifts."

Coach Reynolds announced shortly before game time that his team was in good shape for the Chester attack which was unleashed at 2 o'clock with a fair sized crowd in attendance despite the inclement weather.

The visiting delegation arrived in large busses. Some of the fans also came in the new method of transportation while still others came in automobiles and still others resorted to the "lifts" method.

close of the centennial celebration of this great synod, it may not be amiss to turn from the retrospect of the past and lift our eyes to the prospect in the future. Our interest in the past will be only that of antiquarian unless it teaches us to understand ourselves in the world of today and to forecast the trend of events for the future."

Dr. Wentz appealed to his hearers for renewed visions and ambitions, not to reminisce upon past achievements, but to look back with that pleasure that bespeaks increased spirit and interest and to exert every effort to outdo in the next 100 years what the synod had accomplished during the past hundred.

Continuing the local seminarian said:

Time And Its Changes

"When our fathers gathered a hundred years ago for the early meetings of this newly organized Synod of West Pennsylvania, they came in tedious stage-coaches or on horseback, and their journeys in some cases covered several days. But seven years after the synod began, Matthew Baldwin built 'Old Ironsides' and shortly after that the era of railroad transportation began. Today we sit in our commodious railway coaches or our comfortable automobiles and in a few pleasant hours we make the journey from the remotest parts of the territory to the place of convention. While we are here we can at any time in a few minutes be in direct communication with our homes by telegraph (1848) or telephone, and our touch with world events is maintained by morning and evening editions of the newspapers and by the radio.

"Instead of tediously copying our reports and proceedings with a pen, we have today the swift and easy typewriter (1843). Instead of printing our minutes on cumbersome hand-presses we have the marvelous linotype and steam or electric presses.

"Our fathers in 1825 had the tallow-dip and the flat-wick lamp for their light at the evening sessions. But five years later the Argand burner came into use, a little later illuminating gas, and still later electricity, so that today with a mere turn of the hand we transform the darkness of night into the brilliance of day.

"Perhaps during the next hundred years someone will learn how to harness the energy of the atoms. And if that is ever done, then, in every handful of earth and in every tiny portion of matter whatsoever, we shall have enough energy to drive all the factories of the world for millions of years! But even if we do not master atomic energy, our better acquaintance with wireless and a more thorough knowledge of radiation will completely revolutionize living. Then to kindle a fire and burn something up in order to get light and heat will be considered about as wasteful of energy as to burn down one's house in order to roast one's pork. In less than fifty years from today light will cost about one-fiftieth of its present price and there will be no more night where men live. This alternation of day and night is a check on the freedom of human activity and it will have to go the way of other spiritual and temporal checks.

"Meanwhile a substitute for sleep will have been found. Its chief ingredient will probably be acid sodium phosphate. It will double man's time for work, perhaps triple it, but without shortening the span of his years. And when the West Pennsylvania Synod meets in 2025 there will be no talk of the Harvard plan or any other plan of entertainment, but each delegate will bring his night's lodging along in his vest pocket. Then, too, chemistry will have produced synthetic foods, making them chiefly out of the nitrogen that is in the atmosphere all about us. Then foods will cost only a very very small fraction of what they now cost, and when we come to synod there will be no more talk about the distinction between the country pastorates and the city pastorates. For agriculture will have become a luxury and the country districts will exist only for aesthetic purposes, for the sake of the landscape."

THREE DIE AS PLANE FALLS

Machine Returning From Air Races Crashes In This State Late Friday.

New Salem, Pa., Oct. 17.—Three men met death late yesterday when an army airplane crashed on the Buffington farm here. Clothing worn by the victims was burned from their bodies.

Burned To Death

According to witnesses, the plane, while passing over the Buffington farm, exploded and crashed, catching fire before it struck the ground. The three occupants were burned fatally before they could be taken from the blazing mass of wreckage.

The bodies were brought to an undertaking establishment in New Salem.

A card, partly burned and recovered from one of the bodies, contained the name of Maurice Hutton, Dayton, Ohio. A camera of the kind used by newspaper men was found in the wreckage.

According to those who witnessed the crash the ill-fated plane came into sight flying ahead of a second plane. The latter ship disappeared flying west as the first plane came down.

the men's case here, but declined to discuss the nature of it. He said, however, he had not answered it, but that he expected to do so simultaneously with his reply to the Labor Board. Mr. Barr and Mr. Paddock had nothing to say about their communication.

The brotherhood chiefs at Cleveland in their message to the Labor Board made their proposal to suspend the strike conditional on assurance that the decision of the Labor Board in the case be binding on both sides to the controversy.

Order To Return Awaited

Engineers and firemen who congregated at headquarters at Hagerstown yesterday admitted that word might be received at any moment for them to return to work at the old scale. This order they expected to come from the international officers in Cleveland.

With the suspension possibility in the air, union leaders continued to emphasize the near-perfection of their strike, issuing a statement in Baltimore that the walkout was ninety-eight per cent. In addition, they declared a number of men who recently were given official positions as traveling engineers and firemen, and who have been handling passenger trains since the strike began, had resigned their positions with the road and sought to enter the ranks of the strikers.

"EX-SUITOR" HELD IN DUAL KILLING

Twin Sister of Slain Girl Tells Police Man Had Made Threats.

Milwaukee, Oct. 17.—The first arrest in the hunt for the slayer of Madalynne Latimer, 19-year-old Milwaukee girl, and her fiance, James Sears, of Kenosha, whose bodies were found in a field near Kenosha, was made Friday when Milwaukee and Kenosha deputies took Howard J. Pratt, of Milwaukee, into custody. The deputies said they thought Pratt could throw some light on the case.

Pratt was arrested as he entered his home here. Deputies lay in wait for him for several hours. Pratt is a conductor on the North Shore Electric Railway.

Two Others Arrested

Early Friday two young men were taken into custody by Sheriff Willems, who refused to divulge their names. He said, however, that both had been paying attention to Miss Latimer within a year, and that one of them is married.

When questioned, Pratt denied knowledge of the crime and said he could prove he was home in bed at the time of the killings.

According to Evelyn Latimer, twin sister of Madalynne, Pratt, who she said was a former suitor of the slain girl, had threatened the girl. Evelyn said that Madalynne, after receiving a threat—"if you don't lay off Jimmy I'll get both you"—lived in constant terror.

THE STORY THUS FAR

Pierce Phillips, after helping the Countess Courteau back over Chilkoot Pass, in Alaska, where he had gone to seek gold in the newly discovered fields, meets up with the McCaskey brothers, chance acquaintances on the hazardous trail. While in their tent they are arrested and held for the theft of provisions from the other miners.

The McCaskey brothers had held in trust part of Phillips' savings and they not only accused him of the theft but claimed that they had been robbed of Phillips' money. At a belligerent miners' meeting guilt was fastened on him and all the persuasion of 'Poleon Doret, a friend he had met on the trail, could not dissuade them.

At an opportune time Countess Courteau comes to his rescue, telling the mob that she knew Phillips to have been on the trail at the time he was supposed to have committed the theft.

Jim McCaskey, one of the brothers, edged forward from the crowd and scowling at the Countess, says: "What's the idea, anyhow? Are you stuck on this kid?"

The Countess Courteau eyed her interrogator coolly, her cheeks maintained their even coloring, her eyes were as icy blue as ever. It was plain that she was in no wise embarrassed by his insinuation.

Very quietly she said: "I'll tell you whether I am if you'll tell me who got his thousand dollars. Was it your brother?" Jim McCaskey recoiled; his face whitened. "Who hit you over the head?" the woman persisted. "Did he?"

"That's none of your business," Jim shouted. "I want to know what you're doing in this case. You say the kid was in Linderman last night. Well, I say—you're a—! How d'you know he didn't steal that rice before he left, for that matter?"

"I know he was in Linderman because I was with him."

"With him? All night?" The speaker grinned insultingly.

"Yes, all night. I slept in the same tent with him and—"

"Now I've got your number," the younger McCaskey cried, in triumph.

"Bah!" The Countess shrugged unconcernedly. "As for the rice beingstolen before he—"

"'Countess.' Ha!" Jim burst forth again. "Swell countess you are! The Dyea dance-halls are full of 'countesses' like you—counting percentage checks. Boys, who are you going to believe? She slept all night—"

McCaskey got no further, for with a cry of rage Pierce Phillips set his muscles and landed upon him. It was a mighty blow and it found lodgment upon the side of its victim's face.

It was a mighty blow and it found lodgment upon its victim's face.

Jim McCaskey went down and his assailant, maddened completely by the feel of his enemy's flesh, lunged forward to stamp him beneath his heels. But stout arms seized him, bodies intervened, and he was hurled backward. A shout arose; there was a general scramble for the raised platform. There were yells of:

"Shame!"

"Hang on to him!"

"Stretch him up!"

"Dirty ingrate!"

Phillips fought with desperation; his struggles caused the structure to creak and to strain; men piled over it and joined in the fight. He was whining and sobbing in his fury.

Meanwhile ready hands had rescued Jim from the trampling feet and now held his limp body erect.

It was the clarion call of the Countess Courteau which first made itself heard above the din. She had climbed to the railing and was poised there with one arm outflung, a quivering finger leveled at Jim McCaskey's head.

"Look!" she cried. "Look, men—at his head! There's proof that he's been lying!" The victim of the assault had lost his cap in the scuffle, and with it had gone the bandage. His head was bare now, and, oddly enough, it showed no matted hair, no cut, no bruise, no swelling. It was, in fact, a perfectly normal, healthy, well-preserved cranium.

Phillips ceased his struggles; he passed a shaking hand over his eyes to clear his vision; his captors released him and crowded closer to Jim McCaskey, who was now showing the first signs of returning consciousness.

"He told you he was held up—that his skull was cracked, didn't he?" The Countess threw back her head and laughed unrestrainedly. "My! But you men are fools! Now, then, who do you suppose got young Phillips' money? Use your wits, men."

There was a great craning of necks, a momentary hush, the while Jim McCaskey rolled his head loosely, opened his eyes, and stared wildly about.

The Countess bent down toward him, and now her cheeks had drown white, her blue eyes were flaming.

"Well, my man," she cried, in a shaking voice, "now you know what kind of a woman I am. 'Counting percentage checks,' eh?" She seemed upon the point of reaching out and throttling Jim with her long strong fingers. "Let's see you and your precious brother do a little counting. Count out a thousand dollars for this boy. Quick!"

It was Poleon Doret who searched the palsied victim. While other hands restrained the older brother he went through the younger one and, having done so, handed Pierce Phillips a bulky envelope addressed in the latter's handwriting.

"She's yours, eh?" 'Poleon inquired.

Phillips made a hasty examination, then nodded.

The Countess turned once more to the crowd. "I move that you apologize to Mr. Phillips. Are you game?" Her question met with a yell of approval. "Now, then, there's a new case on the docket, and the charge is highway robbery. Are you ready to vote a verdict?" Her face was set, her eyes still flashed.

"Guilty!" came with a roar.

"Very well. Hang the ruffians if you feel like it!"

She leaped down from her vantage point, and without a word, without a glance behind her, set out along the Dyea trail.

CHAPTER V

"Looked kind of salty for a spell, didn't it?" The grizzled leader of the posse, he who had effected the capture of the thieves, was speaking to Pierce. "Well, I'm due for a private apology. I hope you cherish no hard feelings. Eh?"

"Lucky that woman showed up. Who is she?"

Phillips shook his head. In his turn he inquired, "What are you going to do with the McCaskeys?"

The elder man's face hardened. "I don't know. This talk about hangin' makes me weary. I'd hand 'em; I'd kick a bar'l out from under either of 'em. I've done such things and I never had any bad dreams."

But it was plain that the sentiment favoring such extreme punishment had changed, for a suggestion was made to flog the thieves and send them out of the country. This met with instance response. A motion was put to administer forty lashes and it was carried with a whoop.

Since the younger McCaskey appeared to be still somewhat dazed from the rough handling he had suffered, his brother was thrust forward. The latter was stripped to the waist, his wrists were firmly bound, then trussed up to one of the stout end-poles of the tent-frame which, skeleton-like, stood over the platform. This done, the committee fell back, and the wielder of the whip stepped forward.

The crowd had watched these grim proceedings intently; it became quite silent now. The hour was growing late, the day had been overcast, and a damp chill that scarched the marrow was settling as the short afternoon drew to a close. The prisoner's naked body showed very white beneath his shock of coal-black hair; his flesh seemed tender and the onlookers stared at it in fascination.

Joe McCaskey was a man of nerve; he held himself erect; there was defiance in the gaze which he leveled at the faces below him. But his brother Jim was not made of such stern stuff—he was the meaner, the more cowardly of the pair—and these methodical preparations, the certainty of his own forthcoming ordeal, bred in him a desperate panic. The sight of his brother's flesh bared to the bite of the lash brought home to him the horrifying significance of a flogging, and then, as if to emphasize that significance, the executioner gave his cat-o'-nine-tails a practice swing. As the lashes hissed through the air the victim at the post stiffened rigidly, but his brother, outside the inclosure, writhed in his tracks and uttered a faint moan. Profiting by the inattention of his captors, Jim McCaskey summoned his strength and with an effort born of desperation wrenched himself free. Hands grasped at him as he bolted, bodies barred his way, but he bore them down; before the meaning of the commotion had dawned upon the crowd at large he had fought his way out and was speeding down the street. But fleet-footed men were at his heels, a roar of rage burst from the mob, and in a body it took up the chase. Down the stumpy, muddy trail went the pursuit, and every command to halt spurred the fleeing man to swifter flight. Cabin doors opened; people came running from their tents; some tried to fling themselves in the way of the escaping criminal; packers toiling up the trail heard the approaching clamor, shook off their burdens and endeavored to seize the figure that came bounding ahead of it. But Jim dodged them all. Failing in their attempt to intercept him, these new-comers joined the chase, and the fugitive, once the first frenzy of excitement had died in him, heard their footsteps gaining on him. He was stark mad by now; black terror throttled him. Then some one fired a shot; that shot was followed by others; there came a scattered fusillade, and with a mighty leap Jim McCaskey fell. He collapsed in midair; he was dead when his pursuers reached him.

PENN NOT TO PLAY YALE AGAIN IN '26

Dartmouth Replaces Red and Blue on Bull Dogs' Schedule For Next Year; Games Are Listed.

New Haven, Conn.—Dartmouth will play Yale at football in 1926, it was announced when the Yale football schedule for next year was made public. The Green will appear in New Haven on October 16, 1926, after a one-year absence.

The University of Pennsylvania, which will play here next Saturday, will not be on next year's schedule.

The 1926 schedule as announced follows:

October 2, open; 9, University of Georgia; 16, Dartmouth; 23, Brown; 30, West Point; November 6, Maryland; 13, Princeton at Princeton; 20, Harvard.

Middlebury, which opened this year's schedule, does not appear on next year's list.

The Yale Athletic Association issued this statement: "Dartmouth has again accepted Yale's invitation to play the mid-October game in New Haven. In 1924, football relations with Dartmouth were resumed after a lapse of several years and a game, resulting in a 14-to-14 tie, was one of the most interesting and colorful ever played in the Yale Bowl.

Denies Reports

"This season, because of the fact that Dartmouth had scheduled three out-of-town games, faculty permission for a game with Yale was denied, but the Dartmouth authorities agreed to allow the team to fill a place on Yale's schedule in 1926. The date, corresponding with one on which Dartmouth appeared in the bowl in 1924, was accordingly agreed upon.

"The announcement of the selection of the team to open Yale's 1926 schedule on October 2, will be made soon. So far, negotiations with other colleges have been unsuccessful due to the fact that these colleges were unable to rearrange schedules to fit in with this date.

"The athletic association is glad to announce the acceptance of a date by the University of Georgia. The splendid showing of this team during the past seasons has won them a host of admirers in this section."

ATTACKING AT THE SOURCE

Even the most pessimistic reports on prohibition enforcement all concede that the conditions the first year of prohibition, and perhaps the second, were "good." That is, prohibition was fairly well enforced, and it turned out, when enforced, to be a good thing for the people.

Is this not an encouraging example for the policy of "attacking at the source, says the Lancaster New Era?"

There were just as many thirsty people the first year of prohibition as the fifth, and there were just as many lawless persons willing to peddle booze to them. The difference was the supply.

Retail bootlegging could spring up over night, and did. Wholesale supplies had to await on capitalized organization. Until there were wholesalers to supply them, the petty bootleggers were unable to do much.

And if the wholesome supply can now be curtailed, the retail bootlegging will again be negligible. That is a matter of profits.

Men may buy booze from appetite or smart-Alekness and may peddle it from recklessness, or because they have no other job, but men go into the wholesale smuggling or moonshining business only for profit.

Take that away and you do not need to reform them. They quit. Then the small bootlegger with his homemade moonshine is soon out of a job.

INVESTMENTS

I have some extra dollars which were better saved than spent
And so I'll buy a gilt-edged bond to earn me four per cent;
I'll call that an investment, 'tis a term all bankers use,
But one which money-minded men so frequently abuse.
Not all investments pay in gold,
some pay in peace of mind,
And some in happy memories of days when we were kind.

Life gives us countless dividends in payment for our deeds,
The marigolds are coupons which we cut from planted seeds,
The good will of our neighbors is a joy which we collect
From having neighbored with them in a way they could respect.
Our children are investments, too,
in which our worth shall show,
For seldom 'tis by luck or chance good men and women grow.

We are investors, one and all, by each a choice is made,
Some risk their livess in art and some invest them in a trade.
And who shall give his best to life shall reap his dividends
In peace of mind and happiness, the love and trust of friends;
But who invests in selfishness, in cunning or in shame,
Shall find, however filled his purse,
he's played a losing game.

Bleak poverty of spirit is a failure that is worse
Than the error of wrong judgment which brings poverty to purse.
For money may be squandered, and a stock not worth its cost,
But a good name lives forever and a kind deed's never lost.
So I'd invest my hands and brain
in all life's finer things
And seek the compensation which that sort of venture brings.

The high-wave reception range of the Grebe dial (B)—from 550 down to 240 meters—equals the practical tuning range of the usual receiver. The low-wave range of the Grebe dial (A) provides additional reception down to 150 meters.

You Don't Need Two Radio Receivers

OVER 100 existing stations, with worth-while programs, are beyond the reach of the average receiver because it cannot tune below 240 meters.

Thus, to get both high and low-wave stations requires two receivers—unless you own a Synchrophase. Due to its Low-Wave Extension Circuits—exclusively Grebe—it will receive all stations from 550 down to 150 meters. One dial covers this complete range.

Ask for a demonstration of this and the other recent Grebe developments; then compare.

FARMERS EATING CITY PRODUCTS

Chicago, Oct. 17.—The farmer of today no longer confines his diet to pork and potatoes, but eats the same delicacies as his flat-dwelling neighbor of the city.

Former Secretary of Agriculture Meredith ascertained this fact in compiling statistics from a survey of 55,000 farm homes by questionnaires which took 17,000 hours to "boil down." He gave these facts at the Association of Commerce Tuesday.

"Our survey shows," he said, "that 25 per cent of the 55,000 farmers buy prepared cake flour, with an average of seven and a half packages yearly."

SAVES FINE PIGS IN NICK OF TIME

Expert Finds Prize Litter About To Be Turned Into Bacon And At Slaughter House.

Chicago.—In a dramatic race with death, the world's champion litter of pigs—sixteen of them—has been saved for the high purpose of education.

Grunting excitedly as they crowded their way down the incline at the Chicago stock yards which leads to no greater glory than the American breakfast table these aristocrats of the porcine world were snatched from the jaws of death by eager scientists.

Pig experts focused their attention on the litter the moment it saw the light of day at the Rawleigh farm at Freeport, Illinois. The squirming, chubby youngsters were undoubtedly a most distinctive aggregation of pigs. Six months later they had made good the promise of infancy, averaging 229 5-16 pounds each. The total group tipped the scales at more than two tons.

Pig fanciers marveled.

In The Stock Yards

Then it was learned by a Chicago agricultural organizationu that the champion litter was in this city. Spurred by the knowledge that the pigs had invaded the metropolis, the organization decided to buy them for demonstration purposes and for tests in better stock breeding. An expert was dispatched to seek out the pigs. Too soon he learned the awful truth.

The prize pigs were in the stock yards!

It was then that the race with death began. Peery Ewing, pig expert, who had been commissioned to buy the litter, grabbed a taxi and tore toward the slaughter pens. A pale, breathless figure he hurtled into the executive offices of a great slaughtering company, to demonstrate whether they had the pigs. They had—they also had 25,000 other pigs bought that day. Ewing was given full permission to pick his pet sixteen out of the lot.

On Slippery Incline

He dashed to the pens, and surveyed the grunting chaos. He hurried from pig run to pig run. The sixteen could not be identified. At last he reached the fateful incline, beyond which hangs the slaughter knife.

And the prize herd was there! Saved!

Such is the simple story of the world's champion litter of pigs, saved from the American breakfast table that science may go marching on.

BEAUTY ROSE LOSES ITS CROWN

Cheaper Rose, the Premier, Has Supplanted the Long-famed American Beauty.

Chicago.—The American Beauty rose has been deposed this fall as America's most popular cut flower, and supplanted by a more commercial rose, the Premier.

This typical sign of the times was disclosed at the display of the Illinois florists at the state products' Exposition here.

The account books showed the rose still the most popular of all cut flowers. Such prosaic factors as increasing ground rent and labor costs figure in the deposition of the American Beauty. It requires one-third more ground space and produces only half as many roses for the same amount of work as its usurper, the Premier.

Chicago greenhouses cover 30,000,000 square feet, and their annual output markets for $15,000,000 wholesale.

New Carnation Shown

Florists are offering a new color scheme this fall, in a purple-blue carnation, a flower produced from nine years' crossing and selection. Carnation popularity ranks a close second to the rose.

Another development of the fall is a campaign to educate public taste in cut flowers to fit more nearly with Mother Nature's rules, by popularizing certain flowers at fixed seasons. The campaign includes chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving, lilies for Easter and cyclamen and poinsettia for Christmas.

The cyclamen is an example of educating the public wants to a seasonal flower. It is a domesticated Alpine wildflower, which has ecome a holiday favorite.

Chicago growers have the only wholesale commercial orchid crop west of New York. There are 30,000 orchid plants in the Chicago area, divided among three growers. These may produce about 10,000 blossoms a year, wholesaling for about $2 each.

Yes, to this thought I hold with firm persistence;
The last result of wisdom stamps it true:
He only earns his freedom and existence
Who daily conquers them anew.
—Goethe.

It's hard to tell what's in a man. New York doctors found one with his heart on the right side.

Education's great. Some people cuss and sweat. Educated ones perspire and use profanity.

PACT TO INSURE PEACE IS SIGNED

Crowds Cheer As News Is Announced From Conference Hall In Europe.

Locarno, Switzerland, Oct. 17.—Europe's great security conference ended Friday night in a victory for peace.

At exactly 7:20 the European statesmen who made this victory possible threw open a window on the second floor of the Palace of Justice and, rejecting decorum, announced to the waiting multitude that the Rhine pact and other treaties had been formally approved.

One of their number held aloft the final protocol bearing the signatures of all the delegations as proof that the conference had succeeded in its mission.

Crowd Voices Enthusiasm

Instantly the crowd gave vent to enthusiasm. Rockets were sent into the air, their balls of fire narrowly escaping entering the windows and falling on the shoulders of the delegates. The appearance at the window of M. Briand, French foreign minister, was greeted with prolonged cheering. When the British Foreign Secretary, Austen Chamberlain, came and waved his hand, the crowd clamored for a speech. Chancellor Luther and the German Foreign minister, Dr. Stresemann, were acclaimed with no less fervor than their colleagues.

M. Briand's speech at the closing session of the conference, which adjourned with the understanding that the treaties will be signed in London December 1, was termed by his colleagues afterward the most brilliant effort of his long career.

NEW OXFORD

New Oxford.—At a recent meeting of the New Oxford Fire Company, samples and prices of fire hose were submitted by the committee. The company ordered the chairman, E. C. Livingston, to purchase several hundred feet of hose. The company also gave permission to Fire Chief Felty to take the fire truck to Dillsburg for a demonstration. Mr. Felty and several other firemen went to Dillsburg last Saturday afternoon and demonstrated the truck. The company was reimbursed by citizens of Dillsburg.

The New Oxford ~~Baseball Club~~ closed its affairs at a meeting last Friday evening. All bills were paid. A balance of $4.25 is in the treasury. The manager and directors gave a vote of thanks for services rendered by local players during the past season. Each served without any remuneration. Cash receipts for the season just closed were almost $500 less than the 1924 season.

Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Eckenrode and Mrs. Ignatius Lingg, of Emmitsburg, and Misses Lessie and Nettie Lenhart, of Baltimore, spent the last week-end here with Mr. and Mrs. N. Lingg.

It was decided to meet on the third Wednesday evening of each month.

GALVANIZED roofings all look alike, but they do not wear the same.

It is the composition under the galvanized coating which counts, and the only way to tell is by the name. The name Lyonore Metal is your insurance against loss.

The trade mark appears on every roll that is made of Lyonore Metal—the special alloy that resists rust and corrosion. If there is some other name on the roofing you get, you are receiving a substitute. No substitute made will give the service and wear of Lyonore Metal.

The Favored Four

Because of Supreme Quality, New Performance Results, Advanced Engineering, Superior Workmanship

Out of Chrysler engineering and manufacturing skill come the extraordinary performance and value of the Chrysler Four—plus quality and beauty never before equaled in its price class.

The Chrysler Four is, in the most precise sense, a fine car—fine in principle, fine in materials, and fine in its standards of manufacture and assembly.

It is built with painstaking care, and to a degree of accuracy and precision, heretofore unknown among cars of its price—in the most modern and scientifically equipped manufacturing plants.

Obviously, when such quality is combined with the unusual roadability which results from Chrysler designed spring suspension and balloon tires; with low center of gravity, pivotal steering and the option of Chrysler hydraulic four-wheel brakes to give utmost safety; and with Fisher bodies for maximum comfort—the result is unapproached motor car value in the thousand dollar class.

Everywhere, men and women who know motor cars are favoring the Chrysler Four. Women, who like fine things, say it is a delightful car to drive and to ride in. Men are enthusiastic over its extraordinary performance, its economy and its durability. Test it out, yourself behind the wheel. We are eager to provide the opportunity.

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 17.—American federation of labor Thursday reelected President William Green and his associate officers by acclamation; chose Detroit as next year's convention city; settled two important jurisdictional disputes; declared against formation of an independent labor party and opposed recognition of the Russian soviet by the United States.

His record is one of fair, capable, courageous and impartial administration of the duties of the office, to the end that the laws be enforced and justice done.

The percentage of affirmations of his decisions appealed from is 85, a higher record than any in the district for the last forty years.

He has the judicial temperament and poise; he is studious; he knows the law; he is just; he has proper patience; he has capacity, ability, freedom from prejudice, sureness of mature judgment, and moral character which comprehend business integrity as well as clean living.

He will, under no circumstances, if re-elected, accept or qualify for any judicial pension.

Choose Well--

The Underwear For the Children

Let us offer some sensible words of advice about the selection of your children's underwear for winter.

1. Quality—This should be your first thought, for upon the selection of underwear of quality depends the health and comfort of the little ones.
2. Perfect Fit—This alone will give comfort to the wearer and should be a big consideration.
3. Price—This should be your last thought. Remember that price alone will not assure quality and fit, but when properly coupled, as in our underwear you are assured of getting everything for your money.

AFTER BABY WAS BORN

Mrs. Miles Was Miserable a Long Time—Owes Final Recovery to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Dover, Ohio.—"After my last baby was born I was up and around again, but I was sickly all the time and did not know how to get my work done. I had washed a heavy carpet and I think that was the cause of my troubles. I went to several doctors, but their medicines did not do me any good. I asked what the trouble was, for I could hardly walk and always had such pains in my left side and then in my right side. He told me I had inflammation that caused it. I had one of your text-books and was reading it, and I thought I would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After four days of taking it I began to feel better, so I took three bottles without missing a dose. That helped me more than any other medicine I had yet taken and I always have it handy now. It surely did put me on my feet again."—Mrs. JAMES MILES, 419 Cherry Street, Dover, Ohio.

You must believe that a medicine that helps other women will help you. For sale by druggists everywhere.
